THE MINISTER OF STATE IN THE MINISTRY OF HOME AFFAIRS (SHRI MANIKRAO HODLYA GAVIT): (a) to (d) The Lotteries (Regulation) Act, 1998 does not differentiate between online lotteries and paper lotteries. The policy of the Union Government has all along been against holding or authorisation of lotteries or extending official support to lotteries in any form and for any purpose, howsoever laudable, on the ground that it encourages the spirit of gambling and disturbs the normal economic equilibrium especially in poor families. Therefore, the Union Government neither organizes any lottery of its own, nor does it permit the Union Territory Administrations to organize any lottery. However, since there has been no consensus for banning the lotteries at the national level as some States want to continue with it on the ground that it provides revenue to them, the Lotteries (Prohibition) Bill, 1999 introduced in the Rajya Sabha on 23rd December, 1999 could not be passed till now. The Department-related Parliamentary Standing Committee, to whom the said Bill was referred to, has inter alia, recommended that efforts should be made to evolve larger political consensus on the issue.
